DETECTIVES LOOK FOR COE IN MONTREAL

ANOTHER BRITISH SHIP FLIES U. S. FLAG

First picture to arrive in America of the North Sea naval battle—the greatest sea fight of modern times. This and a second graphic picture on Page 4 were obtained exclusively by the American, arriving today from London. They show the destruction of the big German battle cruiser Bluecher, with her crew of more than 800 aboard. The photograph below shows the Bluecher at the instant the final torpedo struck home—the battle cruiser is heavily listed to port and about to turn turtle—flames and smoke from an interior explosion are billowing out amidships. The forward turret, with its two 8-inch guns, has been swept overboard by a single British shell. One leg of the forward tripod mast is gone. The hull is torn in many places by 12 and 13.5-inch shells. All of the heroic crew who remain alive are seen lined up on the after deck, where they remained singing the "Wacht am Rhein" until the ship went down. The English destroyer which discharged the fatal torpedo has just sped away.

CROSS-EXAMINE ARTIST'S MAID IN THE "TOODLES" LOVE SUIT

Details of the dinner parties given by Charles L. Knoedler, wealthy New York bachelor and art connoisseur, who testified that Miss Elizabeth M. Ryan was a "good pal of mine," and who said he "would like to be a butterfly," came today in the "Toodles" case when Rachel Hall, a colored maid, was put under cross-examination.

The young woman witness said that:

Two young women guests at the parties in Knoedler's apartment had smoked.

A dozen different kinds of wines were served, including champagne, Rhine wine and beer.

She considered Knoedler's pajamas—she testified they were of pink and blue and white and gray and gold—were "a fairly good set."

The guests would sit around, talk, play and sing and sometimes dance and drink and smoke.

They played casino.

She saw Miss Ryan at Knoedler's apartment.

Miss Ryan played cards and "refreshments" were served.

Miss Ryan was her (the maid's) favorite among all the guests.

Asked if the ladies smoked, witness replied:

"Sometimes. A majority of the ladies smoke nowadays anyway."

ASKED FOR NAMES.

She was asked to write down the names of the two women who had smoked. The maid was questioned by Michael L. Sullivan, counsel for Harry K. Mansfield, owner of Fernecroft Inn, whom Miss Ryan is suing for $50,000 for alleged breach of promise to wed.

The usual great throng sought admission to the courtroom, and scores were turned away disappointed.

Miss Ryan, who has usually been accompanied in court by Miss Frances Hemingstone, had a new companion today, a young girl about her own age.

Q—You said your name was Rachel Hall? A.—Yes.

Q—And you are now working in New York? A.—Yes.

Q—What is your occupation? A.—Second girl.

Q—You worked for Charles L. Knoedler? A.—Yes.

Q—How many rooms were in Mr. Knoedler's apartments? A.—Seven rooms and a bath.

Q—And that included your sleeping room? A.—Yes.

Q—I understood you to say you

Duma Head Says Russia Will Dictate Peace

PETROGRAD, Feb. 10.—Russia will dictate the terms of peace at the termination of the war. This was the declaration made by President Rodzianko of the Duma in an address with which he opened today's session. The members of the Duma cheered wildly when President Rodzianko predicted complete victory for Russia and her allies.

"This war must end in victory for us," he said, "for we shall fight until our enemies accept terms of peace."

Interrupted by the cheers he waited until they had subsided and then added: "We shall dictate these terms."

At the conclusion of the president's address the Duma took up various measures relating to the prosecution of the conflict.

Report New North Sea Naval Battle

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 10.—A dispatch from Groningen says that the sound of cannonading in the North Sea could be heard from there this morning and that it is believed another naval battle is taking place.

Groningen is sixty-three miles southeast of Wilhelmshaven, the German naval base, and only a few miles from the Dutch coast.

GIRL SAW COE IN PROVIDENCE

A dispatch from Montreal today said that representatives of the family of Henry Clarke Coe, Jr., the missing Standard Oil salesman, were in Montreal seeking the young man. This may explain the absence from Boston of a detective who is working on the case.

Meanwhile, according to Miss Bettie Tufts of Providence, Coe, whose bride of less than a year is near collapse at their home at No. 1,200 Commonwealth avenue, was in Providence two days after he disappeared, apparently in the best of health.

Half a dozen points in Miss Tufts' story, conceding with facts in Coe's life, make it strongly probable that she is right. She first met the man she saw in Providence in Boston last August. And her story of this meeting is one of the strongest points in the identification of the man as Coe. She said:

TELLS OF MEETING.

"I am a demonstrator of furniture polish. I had been in Roxbury on business, and returned via the Elevated.

"I got on at Northampton street and this man got on just ahead of me and then stood back to give me a seat.

"I had a sample case with me, and

Remarkable Pictures of Big Naval Battle Rushed from London to Boston American

The Boston AMERICAN and the Hearst newspapers scored another extraordinary war "beat" in the reproduction today of the first pictures of the great naval fight in the North Sea, in which the German dreadnought Bluecher was sunk and the other battle cruisers of the Kaiser seriously crippled in their flight from the British warships.

These remarkable photographs were taken by a British naval officer. While the scenes pictured were being enacted the situation between decks was even more appalling. One eyewitness states:

"In one engine room men were picked up by terrible air pressure of exploding shells and tossed to a horrible death amid machinery.

"The Bluecher was under concentrated fire from so many British ships that there was one continuous explosion. The ship heeled over as the broadsides struck her, then righted, rocking like a cradle. The gun crews were so destroyed that stokers had to be requisitioned to carry ammunition. Men who lay flat for safety on decks presented only a tangled mass of bodies and scrap iron.

"In one casemate only one man was undestroyed."

The Hearst papers, through the International News Service, secured the exclusive American and Canadian rights to the

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The United States Steel Corporation today reported unfilled orders on its books on January 31 of 4,345,371 tons, against 3,526,443 tons on December 31 last and 4,613,630 tons on January 31, 1914.

RUSSIANS CLAIM 4 VICTORIES WITH GREAT GERMAN LOSSES

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.
Staff Correspondent Boston American.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 10—Important successes for the Russian troops in Galicia, Hungary, East Prussia and northern Poland are claimed in an official report from the general staff issued here today. These may be summarized in this manner:

1—In Galicia the Russians have repulsed twenty-five separate attacks made by the Austro-German forces at Kozhuvka, about sixty-five miles southeastward of Cracowing. The Germans suffered heavy losses, those defending the slopes of the heights of Kozhuvka, which they occupied, but lost again.

2—In Hungary the Russians forced their way in a charge from the region of Barfeld and Beskidnes. Fighting continued throughout the vicinity of Lupkow Pass in the Carpathians. The Russians captured more than 5,000 soldiers and eighteen machine guns.

3—In East Prussia the Russians received German attacks in the region of Lyck, northeast of Insterburg, and exterminated almost an entire battalion.

4—In northern Poland Russian cavalry concentrated in the region of Rypin has held in check an offensive movement by the Germans.

HEAVY GERMAN LOSSES.

The Russians estimate that the Germans lost fifty thousand men in the battles that ended Sunday.

The General Staff's report says that in the fighting west of Warsaw, which will go down in history as the battle of Bolimow, the Germans lost tens of thousands of men.

The lull in that region which followed the Russian victory continues.

Russian aviators have resumed their activity, and have dropped bombs upon German trenches, trains and soldiers, causing heavy losses.

The report of the General Staff was in full:

"The Germans have been reinforcing their troops in East Prussia, and fresh troops have arrived, making reconnaissances in force on Sunday they passed to the offensive with large forces in the region of Lyck and subsequently undertook active simultaneous operations on two wings, namely, in the region of Lyck-Bolimow, where is established a German army, which, reinforced almost entirely by new troops, and also by cavalry, were put recently to the direction of the Vistula, and in the region of Suwalki, where the enemy's forces were composed of the Tenth Army. They were defeated and wounded on the day's attack on our positions at Lyck, Lomza, Ostrolenka and Lowicz, tens of thousands of men. On the Carpathian front:

"In the region of Dukla and Svidnik the enemy attempted the operations, but was unsuccessful. Having received the Reinforcements of the Guard, leaving many wounded in the region of Lupkow some fire in Russia continued. During the attempt to outflank Uzsok Pass, soldiers and eighteen machine guns.

"The Germans having crossed Torzolka pass made an attempt to develop violent attacks against the Russian positions, but were thrown back and have been compelled to use tornado attacks to cross Uzsok pass

FILMS AID PLEA FOR POOR MOTHER

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 10—Three thousand feet of motion picture film depicting the troubles of a family tortured by poverty, spoke in behalf of the mothers' pension bill before a legislative committee in the Assembly.

The measure would grant to dependent, worthy widowed mothers the amount of money for the support of their children that it would cost to keep them in a public institution.

The chief argument advanced in its behalf is that the mother is better prepared for caring for her children than any institution.

Boni Refused Decision Over Anna Gould

PARIS, Feb. 10.—Count Boni de Castellane has lost his plea for an annulment of his marriage to Anna Gould, according to private dispatches from Rome today.

The dispatch says the Rota Tribunal, which had heretofore rendered one decision for the Count and one against him, has returned a third verdict unfavorable to Count Boni's contention. The procedure of the court provides that two verdicts in accord with each other settle the matter, so Count Boni appears to have lost. Anna Gould divorced Boni and is now the Duchess de Talleyrand.

The history of the Count's litigation before the Vatican court goes back for several years. The Rota Tribunal handed down its first decision December 9, 1913, opposing the annulment, and the second, March 1, 1913, favored it.

Castellane, in his annulment plea, based his contention on the charge that before her marriage to him Anna Gould already contemplated a divorce. He contended that on her wedding day she first threatened to refuse the ceremony, and then said she would go ahead with it, but that if she ever wished to do so she would divorce him.

Anna Gould denied this charge, saying it was not till three years after the marriage that she first thought of divorce.

Howard, George, Edwin and Edith Gould were witnesses before the Rota Tribunal at the original hearings.

After his wife divorced him, Count Boni undertook to secure the custody of their three children. He brought suit for this purpose, and charged that Prince de Sagan whom Anna Gould had married was not a fit companion for the children. The court gave the custody to the mother, but allowed Boni to choose their schools, and forbade Sagan seeing them. When Boni was fighting for an annulment, it was reported that he planned to wed Miss Mabel Gerry.

Son Born to Austrian Heir-Apparent

VIENNA, via London, Feb. 10—Princess Zita of Parma, wife of Archduke Charles Francis, heir-apparent to the Austrian throne, has given birth to a son. They were married in 1911 and have two other children, a son and a daughter.

The Archduke Charles became heir-apparent after the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, the tragedy which led up to the present European War.

Boy of 8 Runs Away for Twelfth Time

Arthur Kierstead, eight, ran away last night from his home at No. 5 Cottage place, Roxbury, for the twelfth time in the past year and he was found in Adams square by the police early today. He was turned over to his father. The police said the lad's mother had let him in at the front door last night, and that the youngster had dashed through the house and escaped from the rear door.

Skylight Thief Ransacks Offices

A skylight thief climbed a fire escape to the roof of the building at No. 571 Atlantic avenue, early today, pried open a skylight and let himself down a chain attached to a pulley. He ransacked the offices of Prescott & Company and Youlden, Smith & Hopkins, but apparently took nothing and escaped.

Library Row in Waltham Ended

Waltham Library war is at an end. Peace has been declared with both sides claiming the victory. It is now agreed that the inscription, Waltham Public Library, be carved over the entrance, while the name of the donor, Francis Buttrick, shall be given a prominent place upon the side of the building.

HIRES WOMEN TO ATTEND ELECTION

HANOVER, Feb. 10—Women attending the town meeting, March 1, will be entitled to twenty-five cents or fifty cents if they are widows, according to notices in the local newspapers. Directions are given in posters and published notices for every woman who wants a quarter to write to postoffice box 918, New York.

The name of the donor is withheld, but it is understood he formerly was a resident of this town. His aim is evidently to stimulate interest among the women of the town in the management of town affairs, and incidentally in woman suffrage.

It is further agreed by the unknown to give the town $25 if the offer brings to the town meeting 1—

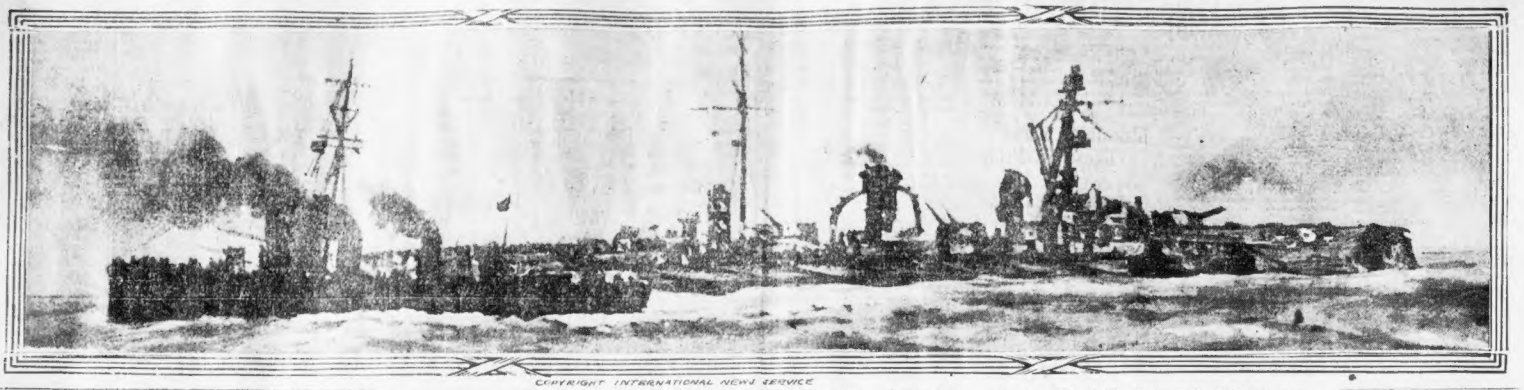
THE BLUECHER, DISABLED BY GUNFIRE, JUST BEFORE THE FINAL TORPEDO STRUCK. THE TORPEDO HAD ALREADY BEEN DISCHARGED BY DESTROYER.



COPYRIGHT INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

The German armored cruiser Blucher corresponded to the armored cruisers of the California class in the United States navy.

The Blucher had a normal displacement of 15,500 tons, a complement of 847 men, an over-all length of 493 feet, maximum draught of 27 feet, twelve 8.2-inch guns, eight 6-inch guns, sixteen 24-pounders and three submerged torpedo tubes.

The California class cruisers have a full load displacement of 15,138 tons, complement of 578 men, over-all length of 504 feet, maximum draught of 26½ feet, four 8-inch guns, fourteen 6-inch guns, eighteen 3-inch guns and four 3-pounders, and two submerged torpedo tubes.

The Blucher was faster than the California class cruisers.

GIRL IS SURE SHE SAW YOUNG COE

POSITIVE IT WAS COE.

She insisted she knew it was Coe, and when Province was in sight Mrs. Tuttle had decided.

And Miss Tuttle's identification positive that the man following in the Coe footsteps appeared in the papers.

She says he told her he was still with the Standard Oil Company.

One of the most interesting points in Miss Tuttle's story is the fact that she knows Coe's bride, Helen Ainslee, when the Ainslees conducted a hotel in Swampscott.

"This was at the New Ocean House, Swampscott," she said. "Now Fitzpatrick was the manager then, and there was a Dr. Tolley and his son staying there, and a man named Miles was head waiter. A Mr. Blackwood was in some venture with Mr. Ainslee at the time. (The Ainslees have relatives named Blackwood.) There were also a Mr. and Mrs. Halley there."

Miss Tuttle says that the man she believes was Coe was accompanied, in Providence, by a man about five feet eight, weighing 180 pounds, with a protruding upper lip, and carrying a blue shooting coat. The two men stood at her table while Clarke or Coe talked with her, then went and sat down at a table. The two men were still there when she left.

INSISTS ON STORY.

"The man with Coe," said Miss Tuttle, "wore a blue coat and a soft hat, and he did not seem the sort of man that Coe would associate with. He was about five feet eight.

"When I talked with Coe in Boston last August he joked me about the amount of goods I sold. I am a dry goods drummer. Monday night I started to bore him along the same lines, but he was evidently not in a humor for jesting."

A. Allen Ainslee, father of Mrs. Coe, the bride of the wedding mass, who is now a collegian of their home at No. 1200 Commonwealth avenue, today said:

"We have no clews to work on. I am expecting a letter today from Dr. Coe, who is in New York, and he will probably shortly return to Boston.

"My daughter is still holding up well under the strain. She was up for a part of yesterday, took a walk and is quite today; but her distress is pitiful."

At the Standard Oil Company's office it was again stated that the company is using every effort to find Coe, that his accounts were all right, and that his place is still held open for him.

In addition to the Providence investigation, work is being put on a report that Coe took a coach for the Far West. This report is based on the following facts:

BOARDED PULLMAN CAR.

On Saturday night Coe disappeared. A man who was Pullman car conductor left a train leaving Denver for points West at 6:00, says today, resembled very closely the picture of Coe, had a berth in his car. This conductor, G. H. Lucas, says that if the man was not Coe, it was his double. Lucas did not notice the presence or absence of a mole. Coe had left Providence before this car, so he could not especially have noticed the mole previous. His ticket was to Chicago.

The North Station train is more definite, says today, the servant who boarded Coe train. Jack McDonough, station attendant, was approached by a man that Saturday night in the afternoon. This man also was nervous. He resembled the published pictures of Coe. He asked to be directed to a restaurant nearby. He was directed to No. 123 Haverhill street.

WAITRESS GIVES CLEW.

At this restaurant a waitress, Miss Claire Tucker, is certain that she waited on Coe at about the time he would have reached the restaurant after leaving McDonough. Not only did the nervous customer resemble Coe, but Miss Tucker declares today that he wore a ring which attracted her attention. This was a three-stone diamond setting, worn on the third finger of the left hand. Miss Tucker, however, cannot remember the side of the hand.

This clew, which would indicate Coe is losing no time working westward, is also in accordance with the theory of Dr. Henry Clarke Coe, father of the missing man. Dr. Coe is certain that his son is headed for some place in which he has spent some time, probably following a subconscious tendency, and unaware of his condition or surroundings, victim of somnabulism.

Dr. Coe has already visited the owner of the ranch on which young Coe spent some time after his graduation from college, directing the people there to keep a sharp lookout for his son.

The man who is placed aboard the Chicago train at the North Station, however, bore no evidences apparent to those who noticed him of being a victim of epilepsy. He seemed, instead, nervous and turbulent, shunning conversation.

How American Secured North Sea Battle Photos

most wonderful naval battle pictures ever taken. They show the German battle cruiser Blucher, battered, torn by shot and shell, with great fire amidships and awful gaping holes in side. The photographs were taken from a British ship nearby, and depict the Blucher sinking with what was left of crew lined up at "attention" in aft of doomed warship. These photographs, which are the only ones in existence of the greatest naval fight of modern times, were dispatched to New York by special messenger on the liner Philadelphia, which arrived in New York yesterday. Another special messenger brought the photographs to Boston. Another picture will be found on Page 2.

The English rights to publish these photographs were purchased by the Illustrated London News Weekly and the London Daily Mail. They were published in London Saturday, and the whole of England has been talking of nothing else all week.

Their reproduction in the Hearst papers is another journalistic triumph by which these newspapers have achieved international fame.

ERROR MAY DELAY FOLSOM HEARING

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Feb. 10.—Owing to an improper service of the writ, the divorce proceedings brought by Mrs. Jeanette Folsom, against the Revered Harold M. Folsom, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church is likely to be postponed to April if not to October.

The writ and summons in the case were served by Deputy Sheriff Kingsman of Somersworth, N. H., upon the door of the last known residence of Folsom in Summer street, this city. At the time Folsom had gone to Montreal and the house had been vacated by the family.

It is now declared that this writ from the clerk of the Superior Court should have been delivered to Mrs. Folsom in person by an officer of the court.

LOOK FOR SUITS IN DISCOUNT CRASH

The receivers of the New England Discount Company, No. 262 Washington street, A. Ingham Bickford and Dwight N. Sullivan, have already attached some of the property of Charles E. Walker, treasurer of the company, since their appointment by Judge Morton, today continued their investigation and it was expected District Attorney Pelletier might be asked to take a hand in the case.

Receiver Bickford said: "It looks as if there would be criminal proceedings. Developments more sensational than those in the Collateral Loan Company may be looked for."

To protect the stockholders in the Discount Company, it is expected that legal action will be brought, first a civil suit, and then a suit in equity.

Walker, who was treasurer of the New England Discount Company, was also the promoter of the company; and he was likewise the moving spirit in the Union Commercial Paper Company, the National Investment and Security Company and the St. George's Bay Fur Company, which have offices connecting with that of the New England Discount Company at No. 262 Washington street.

The history of these companies is the history of a remarkable finance of career. These are the facts as they have come to light.

ORIGINAL CAPITAL $50,000.

The New England Discount Company was organized June 16, 1910. The original capital was $50,000, and the original organizers were William H. Mesarvy, president; Charles E. Walker, secretary and treasurer; and George A. Perkins and M. Harold Boiger.

On July 26, 1910, an additional $30,000 in common stock was authorized, $5,000 of this going to the company for its good will. On December 18, 1911, $10,000 additional common was authorized, and May 1, 1912, a further issue of $50,000 preferred and $120,000 common was authorized.

Of this total there is outstanding at the present time $82,900.

The business of this company was similar to that of a banking institution, the company making loans on collateral at a moderate rate of interest and discounting notes and bills receivable. The company bore a high reputation and was believed able to meet its obligations. They said they did a careful business with little loan.

PAID 24 PER CENT.

Another report on this company said that the first dividend was paid January 12, 1910, and amounted to 5 per cent. Thereafter, the company in April went on a 6 per cent. quarterly basis, or 24 per cent. annually, and kept this up until last October. A great number of investors were attracted to the company by the high rate of interest.

The second company, formed by Mr. Walker and others, was the Union Commercial Paper Company. Mr. Walker was secretary and treasurer of this company, H. L. Harrington president and Rose M. Harrington, Josephine A. Walker and James Rankin were other directors.

The original capital was $50,000—of which $50,000 was common. But in this company also the capital was later increased.

The charter of this company authorizes it to buy and sell all kinds of commercial paper. Walker owns the controlling interest in this as in the other companies. This company now has outstanding twenty-five shares of preferred stock and 2,364 shares of common, according to their own statement. On July 22, they reported to the Commissioner of Corporations that there were 6,041 shares of common stock outstanding.

A Boston bank with which this company has done a regular business says the account was perfectly satisfactory while it continued.

The next of the Walker enterprises was the National Investment and Security Company, organized December 12, 1911.

BIG DIVIDENDS NAMED.

The present officers of this company are Thomas A. Eustis, president; Charles E. Walker, treasurer; and Thomas F. Ioonihan and Charles A. Record, other directors. The company was overlimited to 5,000 shares, right bills receivable from individuals, and from firms of good standing, and to furnish money to retail merchants, manufacturers and wholesale dealers, taking bills for as security and transacting the business as a trust company.

The active management of this company rested with Mr. Walker, who was also treasurer of the New England Discount Company and of the Union Commercial Paper Company, operating from the same offices as the National Investment & Security Company.

MEN — Filene's — MEN

WE WERE called "chumps" about ten days ago when the head of a New York tailoring house asked how much we were going to get for a lot of men's suits he was making for us, and we answered twenty dollars each.

"Why," said he, "I'd have to ask almost that much for them at wholesale under ordinary conditions." We believe him!

BEFORE wartime a member of Earnshaw & Fletcher, Ltd., whose Lumbrook woolen mills are at Hipperholme, Yorks, England, called upon us with their entire and almost endless samples of men's suitings of the sort that have made the fame of these old English mills. From this glowing showing we chose fourteen patterns—the ones we thought best for Boston men. This purchase, direct from the makers, results in an offer tomorrow, of

412 Men's Spring Suits

Fabrics of High-Grade English Woolens—Workmanship Fully up to Filene standards, at . . . $20

ADDED to the price-advantage in purchase of fabrics came a substantial concession on behalf of the makers of these suits. This house—one of the prominent ones in New York—had recently removed to larger quarters. In order to keep business up to increased requirements they were glad to bid low and at the same time agree to our rigorous specifications.

The result is a showing of suits in ABSOLUTELY RIGHT SPRING STYLES at a price all our friends will agree represents substantial saving. Styles for men of all ages, with plenty of snappy styles for young men.

AS FOR the fabrics, it is a long time since we have seen a gathering so uniformly charming as these imported woolens. Clear worsteds predominate, with some serges. There are beautiful overplaids and grays—the wear-like-iron sort.

Coats full-lined in mohair. Plain or patch pockets. All sizes in 33 to 46 chest, inclusive. Stouts, longs, regulars.

THIS is simply one more demonstration of the fact that the Filene men's shops do not wait until the middle or end of a season to put money in thy purse. Better be on hand bright and early tomorrow for the best peeping and picking. $20.

RID STOMACH OF GASES, SOURNESS, AND INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends all stomach distress in five minutes.

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any druggist in your town or in any other town in the world and when you eat a hearty meal and something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lies like a lump, ferments and sours and forms gases that cause headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it. For sale by Riker-Jaynes and all good druggists.—Advertisement.

MEXICAN TROOPS KILL U. S. CITIZEN

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Feb. 10.—Jesse Saldana, a citizen of the United States, was shot to death by Carranza soldiers while fishing from a boat in the Rio Grande opposite this city early today and his body was found floating down the river two miles from Brownsville today. The boat was later dragged to the Mexican side of the river and Saldana's head was found in a shallow grave, while his body was on the American side shrieked pistol for the return of the corpse.

According to stories told to Saldana's friends the fish was caught in the middle of the river. The Carranzistas appeared and ordered him to go to the Mexican side. He refused and was shot.

A troop of United States cavalry was called to the scene after the executive occurred. The soldiers are keeping strict watch to prevent Saldana's friends and relatives making a retaliatory attack.

Villa Takes Part of Guadalajara

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Feb. 10.—Fifteen thousand of Villa's troops are reported to have attacked Guadalajara, Mexico, and heavy fighting is said to be going on there. General Villa is said to be leading his troops, who have already taken a large part of the city, according to advices.

CADERETTA, state of Nuevo Leon, Mexico, Feb. 9, via Laredo, Tex., Feb. 10.—Carrancista troops, commanded by General Pablo Gonzales, today attacked Monterey, the largest city in Northern Mexico. General Villarreal's division assaulted and took several suburbs. The artillery bombardment was terrific and all parts of the city are in ruins.

A Villista regiment, commanded by Colonel Meras, deserted to the Carrancistas, but the attack was discontinued after the unexpected arrival of reinforcements for the Villa troops.

RECTORY SLAYERS BAFFLE POLICE

NEW BRITAIN, Feb. 10.—After a day and night of apparently fruitless effort the State and local police, who, under the guidance of County Coroner Calhoun of Hartford, are endeavoring to untangle the seemingly impenetrable mystery surrounding the murder in the rectory of St. Andrew's Lithuanian Catholic Church of the pastor, the Rev. Father Joseph Zebris, and his housekeeper, Mon Iva Gilmanaitis, confessed they were almost completely at sea, so far as any definite clew to the identity of the slayer or slayers is concerned.

Coroner Calhoun announced this morning that no formal inquest or inquiry in the nature of a hearing would be begun today, but that he and the police would continue the search for clews.

"There is no definite clew unearthed so far," said the coroner, when he was reached at his office in Hartford. He would not discuss the case further than to say that he would continue his inquiry. It has not been definitely established as yet just when the priest and his housekeeper were slain.

The most reliable information on this point yet obtained is the story of Frederick Wank, who lives near the rectory, and who says that about 11:30 o'clock on Monday night he was awakened by the sound of shots. He heard several reports of a discharged weapon of some kind, but did not arise to investigate.

BOY, TOO, HEARD SHOTS.

The police place more credence in the story of Mr. Ward than to that of Albert Rapka, a boy, who lives within ten minutes' walk of the rectory, and who says he heard shots about 7:30 on Monday night. The police have collected the various articles found in the house after the discovery of the body of the dead priest, with four bullet holes in his body and a stout hempen cord around his neck, was found in the study of the rectory. The body of his housekeeper was located in the attic room with a wound in her wrist, probably made with an ice pick which lay near the body. A piece of the same hemp cord as that used on the priest's body and a length of clothesline were tied about her neck.

Whether robbery or revenge was the motive has not been fully determined, although the police are inclined to the former theory in view of the fact that the priest had received Black Hand threats demanding money.

Nevertheless the police and coroner are closely investigating the private life of the Rev. John J. Ambot of Hartford, who received two mysterious callers on Sunday night, and is known to have gone to Father Zebris with reference to their call, and that of John Rasnpa, a parishioner of the dead priest, who says Father Zebris had expressed fear of an attack on his life and asked Kanopa to remain with him in the rectory after he had made a late sick call recently.

On the way to the rectory Kanopa reports seeing two strange men on the same night two men walked at the rectory and asked the priest to perform a marriage ceremony. They were dismissed with a request to bring the bride-to-be with them.

The fact that Father Zebris had during his previous pastorates in churches in Waterbury criticized the Industrial Workers of the World is also being closely looked into. So far as can be learned from his parishioners here he has in no way continued his antipathy in this respect during his many years as pastor here. The fact that the letter received by him in May, 1912, demanding that he secure $11,000 in cash on a check road near here is regarded as significant.

The parishioners of St. Andrew's Church are aroused to a high state of excitement today and crowds gathered about the police headquarters. The church members have called a mass meeting to be held tonight at which a substantial reward will probably be offered for the capture of the murderer or murderers.

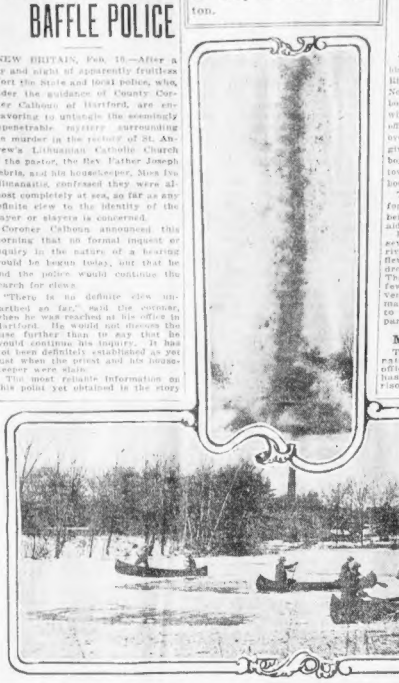
The Rev. Father Ambot of Hartford has been temporarily ordered to take charge of the local parish. He will make arrangements for the funeral of the dead priest, which will probably be held Friday. Father Ambot will also preside at the meeting in the church tonight. That Miss Gilmanaitis, the housekeeper for the priest, was held in high esteem by the parishioners is indicated by the fact that many of them are reported to have entrusted their savings to her. The police are looking it is said, to discover if any of these funds are missing.

Old Time Cold Cure—Drink Tea

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Tee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grippe as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.—Advertisement.

SCENES in search for girl's body in Charles at Newton.



DYNAMITE ICE IN HUNT FOR BODY

"Dynamite" Kent today resumed his breaking up of ice in the Charles River, under the direction of the Newton police, in the search for the body of five-year-old Ellen Edwards, who was drowned February 2. He set off fifty charges, breaking up the ice over wide stretches of the river and giving the police and a number of boy volunteers an opportunity to peer toward the river bed and drag for the body.

The river has now been searched for a distance of two miles, the work being carried into the night with the aid of searchlights.

Ellen, with her brother William, seven, were playing Indian on the river bank when one of their arrows flew out onto the ice. They were drowned in attempting to recover it. The boy's body was found within a few hours. An other casualty was prevented by the fact that a young playmate who saw the tragedy feared to reveal it at first to the children's parents.

Still Seek Body of Horace Gardner

PALATKA, Fla., Feb. 10.—Although Sheriff Kennerly and a posse has been diligently searching the Ocklawaha River swamps for the body of missing Horace Gardner of North Adams, Mass., who with his brother was probable murdered ten days ago, no trace of the missing man has been found. Search for Clyde Stover, the suspected guide, continues. The coroner's jury has returned a verdict against Stover. It was expected that the body of Alonzo Gardner, which was found Sunday, will be shipped north today.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Boston wool exporters, according to State Department officials, have been cleared of the suspicion they were shipping to the Continent wool for German use, and the exportation of wool to America from Australia will be at once resumed.

Dynamite Explosion Kills Two Men

MARION, Ind., Feb. 10.—Two men were killed and a third injured when a dynamite explosion wrecked a shack in the woods near here today. The dead are Ed Hall and Ed Hall, Jr., father and son. Both were blown to pieces. Ed Hall, Jr., was married and lived in Marion. Ed Hall, Sr., lived in Indianapolis.

Smallpox Closes Arizona Legislature

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 10.—Smallpox today prevented the Arizona Legislature from meeting. W. B. Lanier, reading clerk of the House, was stricken with the disease and the legislative body adjourned for two days. Governor Hunt was among those exposed. He and many State officers were vaccinated and the State House is being fumigated.

The wage will be at the rate of 29 cents an hour.

Under the plan adopted by Mr. Rand and approved by Governor Walsh and the State Commission for the promotion of work, the men will clear forests, owned by individuals. The forest owners will pay the State $1.50 a cord, and the money so received will be turned over for more work for the unemployed. Additional men will be put at work in other sections of the State as soon as arrangements can be completed.

Concord, N. H., Man Hurt by Explosion

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 10.—Philip Cote of No. 19 Downing street, a young man of twenty-four, found a can full of powder in his front yard this morning—there is a quarry near—and undertook to explode it. At the Margaret Pillsbury Hospital they found twenty-four wounds in Mr. Cote, but he will recover.

Fight Mrs. Leslie's $1,000,000 to Votes

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—A legal attack will be made on the will of Mrs. Frank Leslie, which left $1,000,000 to the cause of woman suffrage. This was announced when Miss Mattie Sheridan applied for an order directing the executors to pay her $2,000 on account of her $5,000 legacy. The value of the estate is estimated at $2,000,000.

Jesse Pomeroy is anxious to listen to a graphophone and Warden Allen is going to grant his wish. The warden intended to have a concert supplied by a graphophone last Sunday, but, on account of some misunderstanding the machine did not arrive at the institution.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

These pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids and calomel, they take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why poison the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids.

It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "foggy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits. At 10c and 25c per box. All druggists. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Company, Columbus, O.—Advertisement.

CURLEY AND FITZ 'HAPPY'S' GUESTS

Mayor Curley and ex-Mayor Fitzgerald today accepted invitations to be guests at the Happy Twenty ball in Convention Hall on February 19.

Many other prominent people have accepted invitations to attend the event. "Happy," the high chief of the dance, today received a letter from James J. Storrow who said Mrs. Storrow and he would attend. Governor Walsh and many other State and city officials have also been invited, and it is believed their letters of acceptances will be received within a few days.

"Happy" has ordered souvenirs for the first 500 persons to enter the hall.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to flush Kidneys and neutralize irritating acids.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid poison. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.—Advertisement.

New Confession by Wholesale Slayer of Aged

Mors Tells How He Administered Deadly Drugs

Amazing Revelations of Nurse Said to Be Confirmed in Part.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—"It was a very simple matter—the killing of these useless old people. The only difficulty I experienced was in deciding a way to prevent the fumes of the chloroform from escaping into the air of the room and becoming noticeable to anyone who entered."

Sitting calmly puffing a cigarette in the psychopathic ward at Bellevue Hospital, Frederick Mors, discharged porter-nurse in the German Odd Fellows' Home for the Aged, gave a supplemental confession of the wholesale murders to Sergeant Cornelius Willemse.

"I prevented the fumes of the chloroform from escaping by a very simple process which I had learned in Vienna when I was studying medicine," continued Mors with perfect calmness. "First, I would pour a drop or two of the anesthetic on a piece of absorbent cotton. I would stuff cotton in the ears, up the nostrils, etc. Next I would pour a little of the chloroform down the throat and stuff cotton enough in the mouth to prevent any of the fumes from escaping this way.

TROUBLED BY CONSCIENCE.

"In a moment I would place my head against the person's chest. Generally the heart had stopped beating, and I knew I had accomplished my purpose and one more soul was freed of misery and suffering. I consoled myself with the thought that it was all for the best. Now, however, I know that it was wrong. My conscience tells me that I should not have done these things and that is why I am so glad to tell you about them."

Mors reiterated his charges against an official of the home.

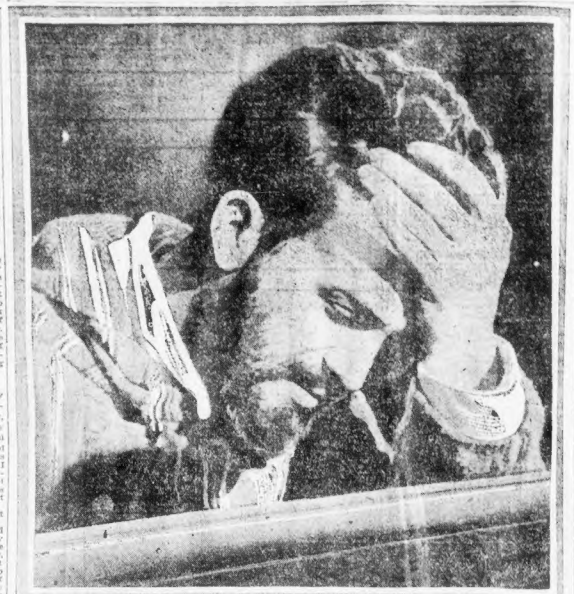
"Mr. —— knew all about me and what I was doing," he said. "Why he began it before I came to the home. He knew that I was clever, and when he saw that I knew what he was doing he asked me to help him. Because of my knowledge of medicine I was of great assistance to him and he valued my services highly.

"Mr. —— kept a medicine glass always in his desk and this glass he was in Unionport in the Bronx. This glass was notched in order to enable him to measure out doses. He always gave the patients doses from this glass and he broke it."

CONFIRM PART OF STORY.

Striking confirmation of part of Mors' supplemental confessions came when Sergeant Willemse and Miss Mary Hirst, Bronx County detectives, went to the rambling old building in Unionport which sheltered the home until October 22 last. Willemse opened an old desk in the executive offices of the home. The first object that met his gaze was a small red leather case. Within was a small medicine glass which had been chipped in two places. The glass was marked according to Mors' description.

The detective seized the glass and took it to the office of District Attorney Martin in the Bronx courthouse. Also he seized specimens of three different varieties of poison—strychnine, codeine sulphate and atrophine sulphate—the poisons were in tablet boxes in the small room on the second floor utilized as a dispensary and of which Mors had complete charge.



Remarkable photograph of Frederick Mors, taken especially for the American. Mors has confessed to the murder of eight aged inmates of the German Odd Fellows' Home near Yonkers, New York.

BOYLSTON SUBWAY STATION SOUGHT

The legislative request of many prominent petitioners for the establishment of a station of the Boylston street subway at Arlington and Berkeley streets will be presented this morning to the Legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs.

By reason of the prominence the request has attained and in view of the large numbers expected to attend the hearing, the committee has been assigned to Room 349, the largest committee room in the State House.

The several petitions on which the request is based are sponsored by Arlington citizens and are signed by many business men identified with the commercial and mercantile development of Boston.

Under the terms of the bills the Boston Transit Commission is directed to establish a new subway station at Arlington street or at some near point substantially midway between the Tremont and Boylston streets station and the Copley Square station. The station would be completed within a year and its cost would be borne in the same manner provided for subway extensions, improvements and alterations.

The principal claim of the petitioners is that a station is needed to break the long stretch of subway between Tremont street and Copley square. They contend also that the station would cater to the needs of the Park square section, as well as a section developed recently in the extreme southerly and westerly end section of the Metropolitan district and a section not properly made available by trolley or railway service.

YOUR RENTING PROBLEM

Will vanish on February 15 or you are sure on that day there will appear in the Sunday issue of the American's New Monthly Renting Directory hundreds of all kinds in and around Boston.

WOMEN NEVER BEST DOCTORS

Dr. Hugh Cabot, who conducted Back Bay surveys, believes that women are just as good physicians as men. He says: "Women are by nature more sympathetic than men, and this quality is a great help in the practice of medicine. From my experience I would say that women are more successful than men in the practice of medicine. In fact, I believe that in the future, as more women enter the profession, they will outstrip the men.

"AND if I had taken it up, you big dray horse, you'd have died—standing up in your traces!"

"Would I? Well, you worm, I'll bet you a thousand dollars that you'd be the first to crawl!"

"Prove it!" chirped Nettleton.

"I will. I'm game for Van's little hand of poker just for the satisfaction of seeing you duck. Take me?"

"Aw bluff—bluff. Your usual game, T."

"Then call it," cried T., sharply. And in the face of his partner's incredulous sneer he repeated: "If I'm bluffing, CALL MY BLUFF!"

"All right, I will," replied Nettleton. But there was desperate uneasiness in his tone.

Vanderholt clinched matters quickly. You're one—both of you! Miss Parker, get your book. I'll put this down in contract form and have no comeback!"

ONE IS WORRIED

Nettleton and Johns looked at him keenly. There was confident assessment on Johns' good-natured and good-looking face. Nettleton rose as if to protest and then sank down—panic-stricken—as Vanderholt purred out softly:

"Now, then, which is to be the quitter? Speak up—don't mind me. Don't be afraid of hurting me. Now, you in a short—quick—clean cut—the quitter proposition! Well, I am waiting!" he mocked, taunting-ly. "Miss Parker!"

An very decently fully got out her note book, sir," she quavered.

"And don't you interrupt me," continued Vanderholt, walking jerkily about and prying out his imitation with rapid, nervous force.

"The agreement is made and entered into this blank day of June, 1914, by and between George B. Nettleton, party of the first part, and T. Dugan Johns, party of the second part."

Johns rose so quickly that he seemed fairly to bounce from his chair. "Hold on there! I decline—positively—to be known as the party of the second part!"

Nettleton had been sitting nervously ramming his hands in and out of his trousers pockets. Now he rose dramatically to the occasion and bellitled Johns: "That's always the way with that pin-headed captain of industry—blocks everything!"

"Thanks, George! I'll make you party of the second part," said the dictator.

"No, I'm hanged if you will! I wouldn't give him that much satisfaction for worlds of contracts!"

Vanderholt ran his hands wildly across his forehead. But he was very careful not to disarrange the satanic whirl into which his hair was brushed just above his broad brow!

"Wrought Miss Parker, strike that out! Take this agreement, made and entered into this blank day of June by and between the parties who have hereto set their hands and sale, witnesseth: Paragraph, Whereas, the parties hereto have found it impossible to continue as business partners, they hereby agree and do agree as follows: Paragraph: To play one hand of showdown in a game which for future legal reference may be known as poker—and the loser in said game, for the term of one year from date hereof, shall become the household servant of winner of said game, the winner hereinafter to be known as the master, and the loser hereinafter to be known as the man, except in the following conditions, as to wit:"

Turning in his nervous pacing, Van faced his victims. "All right, here!"

HIS LUCKY DAY

Johns grinned with the joyous assurance of a sure winner. "This was his lucky day—and he knew it. "Fine!" he acceded, leering derisively at Nettleton.

That gentleman was sunk in deep and bitter dejection in his chair, and he was nervously mopping a deep and steamy brow. "You—that's splendid!" he hissed out.

Johns bounced forth, peering keen.

"Good!" assented Vanderholt in his best legal manner. Then he continued his dictation to Sally.

"Clause One—And the Master shall have full and absolute control of all matters pertaining to the Eureka Digestive Pill Company, without stay, hindrance or protest of interference on the part of the Man.

Whereupon both partners rose with automatic precision and at once registers deep and abiding protest. Vanderholt smiled paternally and held out his hands to quiet them.

"But—the Master shall credit the Man's account with all income, commissions or other moneys rightfully his.

Whereupon, with automatic mathematic precision and at once, registers deep and abiding protest. Vanderholt smiled paternally and held out his hands to quiet them.

"But—the Master shall credit the Man's account with all income, commissions or other moneys rightfully his.

Whereupon, with automatic mathematic precision and at once, quite something that with which they had arisen, Nettleton and Johns sank down again with great and evident relief, and Van continued:

"And shall hold same subject to cancellation for bad behavior."

"Say, Van—what kind of bad behavior?" hissed out Nettleton in an awful terror.

"I'm coming to that. Clause Two—And the man shall immediately enter the service of the master, as his servant, valet or in such other capacity as may seem good and proper to the said master's wishes or desires."

Johns grinned again—a large, placid smile as of one who ponders things and likes what he sees. Nettleton looked like a man struggling in the throes of a very bad nightmare! And still the dictator went on:

"And, furthermore, the man shall serve the master with entire obedience, respect and in all other ways of strict obedience as are generally accepted with the duties of a menial."

Johns began to laugh. Then he fairly rolled about in his chair shouting with mirth. He mopped his brow. So did Nettleton. But their emotions were entirely dissimilar.

"Excuse me, Van—I can't help it!" shouted the mirthful one. "You know I'm to be married in October, and I'm thinking how great it would be to start housekeeping with Nettleton as our butler! Ha! ha!" He fairly choked with gurgling merriment. "It's too good. Anything we want done—we'll let George do it!"

ALMOST A FIGHT

Nettleton grabbed up a litter-press that lay before him—but the lawyer stopped him. And on Thomas J. Vanderholt's face there was a neat little smile that just matched the little devil's curl above his forehead.

"Here, you! No assault and battery! Hand over that weapon, George! Last line, Miss Parker—

"In all other acts of strict obedience as are generally accepted with the duties of a menial," read Miss Parker, with patronizing precision, Vanderholt took up the thread of his discourse.

"But for each and every violation of such acts the master may charge the man's account in the sum of one hundred dollars' forfeit."

Johns chuckled and rubbed his itching palms expectantly. Nettleton got of his wilting collar and mopped his neck with his handkerchief.

The voice went on: "It is understood and agreed, however, that the master shall pay the man, in addition to his board and lodging, the sum of twenty dollars per month in wages."

"Oh, see here, Van, that's rather small, isn't it?" protested Nettleton weakly.

Johns broke in magnanimously, quite as if the whole affair was a foregone conclusion. "Oh, all right, I'll make it thirty."

Vanderholt took his turn at grinning. Then he issued an order to his secretary:

"Change it to thirty. Clause Three. The other party to whom the conditions of this agreement may be made known is Mrs. George B. Nettleton."

"And where does Mrs. Nettleton come in?" demanded Johns.

"In either case she's not to know whether George is your servant or you his. What's the matter with you?"

"Oh! Then you've got to put in another clause to hold down George B. Nettleton."

"I'm going to. Take this, Miss Parker. It is understood and agreed, however, that should either of the parties hereto, or the wife of one of the parties hereto, be cognizant of the nature of the agreement to any other person than the parties hereto, shall pay over to the aggrieved party the sum of five thousand dollars—cash."

"Nothing doing!" cried Johns. "No, that isn't fair! That makes me responsible for ten thousand to his five!"

"Not unless you and your wife both tell somebody the matter with you!" snapped Johns.

"That's right, George. Keep quiet," directed Vanderholt, with a calmly superior glance that twinkled strangely over the head of unsuspecting Johns. "Go on Miss Parker. Clause Four: This agreement may at any time be annulled and cancelled, but only by mutual consent. And should either party fail to faithfully fulfill the covenants herein contained then such party shall forfeit to the other party all his stock and other interests in the Eureka Digestive Pill Company."

A "Lovable" Girl!

Or, Perhaps, an Idea for the Coquette

By NELL BRINKLEY

The Czar and the Jester

IN THE court of Czar Nicholas I. there lived a woman, or jester who was allowed certain latitudes. One day he presented himself at the office of the Marshal of the Palace for the purpose of asking for a vacation and some pocket money. While he was waiting in the anteroom the Czar entered. This interview is thus described in "Bibliothek der Unterhaltung und des Wissens":

"What are you doing here, Martinow?" inquired Nicholas.

"I came here to ask the marshal for a leave of absence.

"Come along with me, and I will present your case for you."

So the Czar, accompanied with the jester, entered the marshal's office and said to him, "I have a request to make in behalf of my friend here, but"—and he turned to Martinow—"first you must make some fun for us."

Martinow was embarrassed. "I'm afraid I can't do it, your Majesty. It hasn't anything to do with—"

"Here, less my bailiwick!" said Martinow put it on his head, threw out his chest and, assuming a haughty air, addressed the marshal in a tone exactly like that of the Czar. "Sir, how well are you satisfied with out jester, Martinow?"

"Without waiting for the answer, he took off the helmet and, assuming the bearing of the person addressed in the latter's tone of voice, "Very well satisfied indeed, your majesty."

He then replaced the helmet on his head and said, imitating the Czar, "If you, sir, are satisfied with the jester, then we shall let him have a thousand roubles and a three months' leave of absence."

Then, in the voice of the marshal, he said, "It shall be done as you wish, your Majesty; it shall be done."

The Czar laughed uproariously at this clever bit of dialogue and said graciously: "Since Martinow has ordered it in the name of the Czar, we must grant it. All right, Martinow, take care of yourself, and good luck to you!"

English—As She Is Wrote

Our language has also been wrote often conveys a meaning quite different from the intention of the writer. Here are some examples:

"A fellow was arrested with short hairs."

"I saw a man digging a well with a Roman nose."

An advertiser wrote: "Wanted, a young man to look after a horse of the Methodist persuasion."

A remarkable instance of charity: "A wealthy gentleman will adopt a little boy with a small family."

In the account of a railway accident appeared the following: "The captain swam ashore, so did the chambermaid; she was insured for a large sum, and landed with pig iron."

An Irishman complained to his physician that "he stuffed him so much with drugs that he was ill a long time after he got well."

A Pleasant Change

"William, dear," Wilson's wife as he settled down for his afternoon smoke, "I've got a lot of things I want to talk to you about."

"Good!" said William. "I'm glad to hear it. Usually you have to talk to me about a lot of things I haven't got."

No English Need Apply

"Who is your favorite composer?" inquired an artistic visitor.

"I can't say just at this moment," answered Mr. Browne, with an appealing glance at his wife, "but it's somebody whose music I can't remember and whose name I can't pronounce."

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

The parvenu was dilating on the merits of his newly-acquired Old Masters.

"How do you like my Botticelli?" he inquired of one of his two guests.

"Splendid," was the reply; but to be quite frank with you, I prefer the Chianti."

On the way home the other guest remarked to the amateur of Chianti, "I say, old chap, what an awful brute you made when old Hoggenheimer asked how you liked his Botticelli. Botticelli isn't a wine, you silly ass; it's a cheese!"

* * *

"Little pictures leave me cold; it's the big canvases that I like."

"You're an art critic!"

"Not I; a frame maker."

HOW SHE ENDED TEN YEARS OF SKIN-TORTURE

Oct. 28, 1914—"I had eczema on my face for ten years. Little red pimples formed in a small spot on my chin and then spread all over my face. They itched and burned me awfully. It was certainly embarrassing to me, and I would not go amongst people. I tried almost every remedy and treatment that could be used for this trouble, but nothing did me any good. I used Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, and was relieved in a day or two, and in one month I was cured. This was six months ago and the trouble has never returned."—(Signed) Mrs. C. C. Don't Merely "Stop" a Cough

Stop the Thing that Causes It and the Cough will Stop Itself

A cough is really one of our best friends. It warns us that there is inflammation or obstruction in a dangerous place. Therefore, when you get a bad cough don't proceed to dose yourself with a lot of drugs that merely "stop" the cough temporarily by deadening the throat nerves. Treat the cause—heal the inflamed membranes. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make an obstinate cough vanish more quickly than you ever thought possible.

Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you a full pint of the most pleasant and effective cough remedy you ever used, at a cost of only 54 cents. No bother to prepare. Full directions with Pinex.

It heals the inflamed membranes so good and promptly that you wonder how it does it. Also loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Their Married Life

Helen Buys a New Coat for Winifred and Actually Pleases Warren

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service.

WARREN had just left to go to his office. Helen stood irresolutely in their living room, gazing abstractedly through the rain-beaten windows. Warren's last words to her had been, "Don't go out. You know you always get a cold or one of your headaches when you trail around shopping on a day like this."

Helen thought it would be a good day to go over some of Winifred's clothes. She had bought several new things for the little girl early in the Autumn, but really she did need a new coat. It seemed a pity, for the Winter was nearly over, and Winifred would have to have a new Spring coat of some sort. It bothered Helen, who always thought over carefully all expenses, frequently to Warren's annoyance—who, with all his faults, was at least generous to a degree and didn't believe in a thorough calculation of every penny expended.

Helen called Nora. "Miss Winifred's coat isn't in the hall closet. Did you put it away, Nora?"

"It is in your closet, ma'am, hanging in the back," she answered from the kitchen.

Helen went into her room and took the coat out. In the strong, morning light it was decidedly shabby. Next Sunday, she and Warren and Winifred were going to Carrie, Warren's sister, for dinner. Carrie was always so critical, and her children were always immaculately dressed. Something would have to be done for Winifred.

Why couldn't she make a little coat for her, Helen mused? She tried to think of something which she might have in the apartment which would do. Suddenly she darted over to the bureau, opened the lower drawer and quickly pulled out a flat box. It contained a skirt of very lovely shade of dark brown broadcloth. Helen had bought it at a sale, it had never been becoming, and consequently she had never worn it. The color was exceedingly pretty and the cloth was quite good. It would be just the thing for Winifred! The first thing to do would be to rip it. She snatched up a scissors, sat on the bed and started in. She hummed a little tune as she worked, planning how she would make the coat.

She had some pieces of beaver fur which would be just the thing for the collar and cuffs. There remained only one seam to rip. To her dismay she found that on the breadth which was the widest there were three decided streaks or faded spots. Helen could have cried. If Warren were home he would have told her it was the result of buying cheap material. She took the cloth to Nora.

NORA IS PUZZLED OVER THE QUEER STAIN

"Do you suppose I can take this stain out?" Helen asked.

"Well, I dunno, ma'am," Nora answered in her usual non-committal fashion. "What is it?"

"That's just it, I don't know," Helen said.

"Give it to me, Mrs. Curtis, and I'll see what I can do with it. Maybe it will rub out."

Helen went back to her room to find the fur she had thought of using. A moment later Nora came in. "It is no use, Mrs. Curtis," she announced. "The cloth is spoiled. It's too bad. Where were you going to do with it?" she inquired.

"I wanted to make a coat for Miss Winifred.

Today was Thursday. Winifred had to have the coat by Saturday night. If Helen were going to buy it she would have to go downtown that afternoon. She looked up at the little clock on the mantelpiece. Half-past twelve already! Helen thought guiltily of Warren's parting injunction, but she decided to go any way. She needn't tell him she had been out. Other wives didn't tell their husbands everything, she reasoned.

By 2 o'clock she was in the centre of the shopping district. She went through the children's departments of two shops and already found herself growing tired. At the third place she found an obliging saleswoman, who, after showing Helen several coats, brought out one of a tan-colored material trimmed with beaver fur. It was exactly what she had thought of! But it was expensive. For once Helen valiantly crushed all qualms on that score, and promptly said she would take it. She would have it wrapped and carry it home. She was so anxious to try it on Winifred that she had to have it at once.

At last she reached the apartment. She quickly inserted the key in the lock and fairly ran into the hallway. To her dismay she was confronted by Warren.

"Well, here you are at last," he said. "Where on earth have you been? You must be crazy to go out on such a day, if you don't have to. It's after five, too. I came home early, specially, because I thought you'd be alone. There's no pleasing or doing the right thing for women, it seems to me."

SHE TELLS WARREN TO LOOK AT THE COAT

"Oh, Warren, don't let's argue!" Helen cried. "What does it matter if I have been out? I'm all right, not a bit wet—really." She smiled up at him, then kissed him. "Really, Warren, you know I'm old enough to know my own mind and not always to submit to every whim of yours," she said, with more spirit than she usually dared show. For once Warren said nothing and looked startled at her. Helen's tone of quality was an unusual one for her to adopt. He turned from her.

"Wait a moment, Warren. I'll tell Nora to have tea for us and light a fire in the living room. It will be cozy and cheerful. And, oh, Warren, do come in and look at the coat I've bought for Winifred! It's too adorable! You'll love it!"

Warren's anger having melted under Helen's enthusiasm, he followed her into the living room in a complete state of mollification.

"Tell Nora to hurry with that tea," he commanded. "I'm mighty hungry, dear. Now let's see the coat."

THE GERMAN WOUNDED.

Berlin, Feb. 10th. (By wireless to Sayville, L. I.)

The Germans are terrifically systematic about their care of the wounded. All their men found on the battlefield receive a "First aid dressing." Each is tagged with a card, which indicates whether he is badly hurt or not. From the battlefield the wounded men are gotten back to the field hospitals or to headquarters. A man may be badly wounded and yet be back on the firing line in three months. Good sure blood is what helps the soldier through—his wounds heal easily after antiseptic dressings. It is well for everybody to put the blood in good order. Don't trifle with health! It's too precious a possession.

It is trifling to neglect the little every-day ills of children. It is trifling, too, to take medicines of unknown or doubtful ingredients. If your stomach gets out of order, your food is not digested and, of course, your blood gets thin, your nerves get weak, ready to be a prey to the disease germs always ready to attack the run-down and the anaemic. If your liver gets out of order, your blood becomes impure and many troubles follow. If your bowels are irregular, poisons accumulate in your body. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery (in tablet or liquid form) helps the stomach to digest food properly, strengthens the liver, regulates the bowels. As a consequence you are vigorous, full of snap and life! Fifty years ago Dr. Pierce discovered that a glycerine extract of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, of queen's root and bloodroot with black cherry bark would aid all the digestive organs in work as Nature intended they should. Thousands have found that the "Golden Medical Discovery" he then introduced to the world has restored them to health when suffering from stomach and liver troubles. Now is the time to try this famous remedy.—Advertisement.

POLICE HEAD MAY BE NAMED TONIGHT

It is expected that at roll call tonight Police Commissioner O'Meara will name his new superintendent of police to take the place of William H. Pierce, retired Monday after thirty years of service in the police department.

Speculation in police circles favor the name of Chief Inspector McGuire as that to be selected by O'Meara. The commissioner has strong ideas about promotions in his department and has never promoted a man to any executive office in the department who is likely to be retired in a few months from the date of his promotion.

Lawrence Cain, for many years a captain at Station 1, a deputy superintendent and now acting superintendent, is one of the most popular officers in the department, but his retirement will come within a year and it is doubtful if he receives the promotion.

Acting Superintendent Cain is at present in command of the department, but will not discuss the chances of his promotion. Captains Canney, Sullivan and Armstrong are also mentioned as possible successors to Superintendent Pierce.

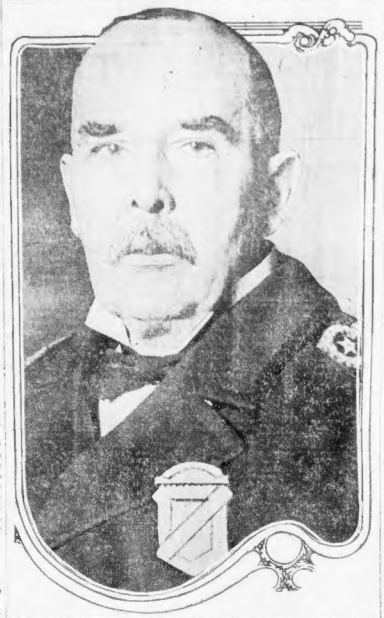
Canadians Place Embargo on Nickel

LONDON, Jan. 29.—By mail to New York, Feb. 10.—The British Foreign Office has just been advised that the Canadian government has taken steps to prevent nickel, produced in the Dominion, from finding its way through the United States into Germany, where it is used in the manufacture of nickel steel for armor plate and war munitions.

Socialists Expel Karl Liebknecht

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 10.—Karl Liebknecht, the famous German socialist, has been read out of his party because of his opposition to the war according to a dispatch from Berlin

CAPTAIN CAIN, ACTING HEAD OF BOSTON POLICE DEPARTMENT



It says that Herr Ruehle, a Socialist member of the Reichstag, made the announcement, stating that the delegates to the meeting which discussed Liebknecht's actions voted against him 45 to 26.

HOLD 2 IN HUTT JEWEL ROBBERY

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Floyd F. Vail, and his brother, Roswell S. Vail, both young brokers and sons of Floyd Vail, sr., formerly president of Wall Street, were under arrest early today on the technical charge of being "suspicious characters."

A complaint against them made to the police on April 26, 1914, of jewels valued at $15,000 from the home of Mrs. Henry Hutt, former wife of the artist.

Since Mrs. Hutt and the young brokers met at Narragansett Pier two years ago, friendship has existed between the three. At the time when the robbery is believed to have taken place, Floyd F. Vail was dining with Mrs. Hutt in her home, according to Mrs. Vail, sr., and expected to go much later to the theatre later.

Both men protested their innocence when apprehended. Their father numbered the friendship of his sons with Mrs. Hutt, and said she had often visited in the Vail home.

J., Feb. 10.—One striker sympathizer was shot and is in a critical condition, and Samuel Lohman, superintendent of the plant, is under arrest accused of the shooting, as the result of a strike riot in front of the box and can factory of Lohmeyer & Petit. The injured man is Max Paskin, twenty-three years old.

Wife Slayer to Hang; First Death Doom in 20 Years

MANCHESTER, N. H., Feb. 10.—Joseph J. Conery, who committed the murder by poison of Mrs. Bridget Hollis, has been pronounced at the State prison at Concord on February 16, 1916, sentence to be the first time a death sentence has been pronounced in nearly a generation. The last execution in the state was that of Frank Abbott, May 15, 1885, for the murder of Jay Webber of Hanover.

The sentence was imposed on recommendation of the jury, upon hearing evidence and every counsel had argued that in view of his confession the court should sentence him to life imprisonment. The court however, decided that the gravity of the premeditated crime demanded the death penalty.

Spain to Disregard German War Zone

MADRID, Feb. 10.—Spain will act with other neutral countries in disregarding Germany's confiscation of war zone about Great Britain. In an officially inspired article Ye Liberal says today: "Though the governor has solemnly has declared a blockade, it is a principle on paper only as Germany is incapable of maintaining even a cruiser blockade along the British coast line."

Pin Police Badge at Sleeping Man's Side

Thieves who gained entrance through a window broke into the home of Joseph Delorey, forester on the estate of Charles F. Adams, Concord avenue, South Lincoln, and stole the savings of $250 from a trunk. They pinned Delorey's special police man's badge to the clothing which covered him while he slept.

WELSH AND SHUGRUE DRAW IN THEIR SECOND 10-ROUND MEETING IN NEW YOR

WELSH AND SHUGRUE IN DRAW AFTER TEN ROUNDS OF HARD, FAST AND CLEVER BATTLING

By W. S. FARNSWORTH.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Whenever a writer calls a bout a draw they say his pedals are chilled. Well yours truly must be extremely cold inside his No. 8's for he was unable to give anything but an even break at the end of the tenth round of the Freddie Welsh-Joe Shugrue mill at Madison Square Garden last night.

Summed up, the work of the lads, rounds for round, honors proved exactly even. Welsh had the first, third and fourth spasms, while Shugrue earned the second, seventh and eighth. The fifth, sixth, ninth and tenth were even.

It was not a bad fight and it was not any demon affair, either. Both boys gave the best they had. It was a clever exhibition, but none of the blows that landed carried any real steam. Welsh managed to start Shugrue's nose bleeding in the fifth with a straight left, but that was all the damage done.

WELSH FIRST TO LAND.

The boys fell into a wrestling match as they came out for the first round. Welsh jabbed Shugrue in the face and then hooked a left to the body, which he followed with a straight left to the face.

Shugrue missed with rights and lefts to the head. At close quarters Shugrue worked both his hands to the body. Welsh jabbed with his left and took a hard left to the wind in return. It was Welsh' round by a shade.

A lot of wild swings started the second round and finally Shugrue hooked his right hard to the head and they exchanged rights and fell into a clinch.

Shugrue shot two straight lefts to the face and followed with a long hook to the jaw. Welsh jabbed with a left and Shugrue returned the blow. They got to close quarters and Welsh worked his right to the body. It was Shugrue's round.

Shugrue came out of his corner in the third and missed both rights and lefts to the head. Shugrue hooked his right to the head and then uppercut with it. Welsh shot a straight left to the nose and in close beat Shugrue to the body punches.

HARD FIGHTING IN FOURTH.

Shugrue was short with a left and Welsh crossed a hard right to the jaw. Freddie got his jabber with both hands to the stomach. Welsh was a game round.

Welsh hooked a hard left to the head at the opening of the fifth and repeated a second later. Welsh hooked a left to the head. Freddie's left started Joe's nose bleeding. Shugrue crossed a right to the head. The round was even.

Welsh ran over to Shugrue's corner in the tenth and as they shook hands sent a left to the body.

In the clinches Welsh worked his head. Shugrue hooked a hard left to the head and an even break followed. Welsh hooked both hands hard to the head in an exchange. It was a tame round.

Welsh was the aggressor throughout and deserved the shade because he landed the cleaner blows.

They exchanged lefts on the head in the fourth and as they went to close quarters, Welsh hooked a right to the jaw. As they fought themselves out of a clinch, Welsh hooked both hands to the head.

At the bell Welsh worked into close quarters and jabbed his left to the body again. The champion had the round by a shade.

Shugrue stabbed two lefts to the face in the fifth and they exchanged straight lefts to the head. Welsh cleverly blocked a half dozen right and left swings. Welsh jabbed twice with his left without a return.

SHUGRUE MISSED OFTEN.

Shugrue missed with his left but brought one over that landed flush on Welsh's jaw. Shugrue shot a straight left to the head and then they exchanged lefts to the body.

Shugrue hooked a hard right swing at the opening of the sixth round and they fell into a clinch. Freddie jabbed with a left and clinched.

Shugrue landed hard on Welsh's neck with a right. Welsh landed a hard left to the nose and jabbed with his left. It was a slow round and about even.

They rushed to close quarters in the seventh and did a lot of fighting. Welsh jabbed with a left and cracked a hard left swing.

Shugrue jolted the champion with a right to the jaw. Welsh hammed a half dozen lefts into the body in a clinch, but they had little steam behind them.

As they fought themselves out of a clinch, Shugrue hooked a hard left to the jaw. Shugrue had a big edge in the round.

Welsh hooked a hard left to the head in the opening of the eighth and repeated a second later. Welsh hooked a left to the head. Freddie's left started Joe's nose bleeding. Shugrue crossed a right to the head. The round was even.

Welsh ran over to Shugrue's corner in the tenth and as they shook hands sent a left to the body.

Brickley will leave for a trip through New York State tomorrow, stopping at Syracuse Friday to visit Stan Pennock, his roommate, and on Saturday speaking before the Harvard Club of Buffalo. The following Monday he will address the students of the Lafayette high school of Buffalo.

RESULTS OF OTHER BOXING BOUTS

AT ALBANY, NEW YORK—Walter Hoch of Brooklyn handed a stiff lacing to Frankie Mack of Beachmont, in a fast ten-round bout.

Mohr was the superior of Mack at nearly all stages of the game and severe punishment at close quarters. The Philadelphia cruiser rushed and clinched continually and when he got in close he rained rights and lefts to Mack's low body.

Mack fought a great battle, doing some very effective work at long range. He was Mohr's master as a boxer and landed several clean, solid punches.

AT NEW YORK—Phil Bloom of Brooklyn was too elusive for Gilbert Gallant of Boston in their ten-round bout at the Broadway Sporting Club. Bloom earned the honors in every round and staggered his adversary in the last two sessions. In another bout Willie Astay knocked out Freddie Lavin two rounds.

AT NORTH ADAMS—Young Clancy of Boston, who substituted for Joe Chick of Gloucester, was no match for Young Grady of Fownal, Vt., in the bout before the Western Massachusetts A. C.

Grady floored his opponent three times in the opening round and finished him in the fourth.

Young Jack of Utica and Young Allard of Hoosick Falls, N. Y., boxed six rounds to a draw, and Young Percy bested Young Marcoun in four rounds.

AT HOULTON, Me.—Tommy Moore of Providence, R. I., fought one of the gamest bouts ever seen in a ring at a boxer and landed several clean, solid punches.

Moore was forced to throw the sponge in the third round of the second series of the two six-round bouts.

AT PHILADELPHIA—Kid Goodman beated Mike Daley at the Fairmount A. C. Daley showed more cleverness, but Goodman proved the stronger and forced the fighting from the start. Goodman was wild with his swings, but when he did land his punches had a telling kick.

BUSINESS OF CHANGING ONE'S MIND.

I once was sad and peevish
About my daily job.
"I am a slave," I murmured,
"A poor, downtrodden slob.

"I labor from the morning
Until the twilight pale,
While others doing nothing,
Bask in the golden kale."

But now I have forgotten
The kicks that once I made.
In peace and deep contentment
I ply my daily trade.

And while I sit and labor
A smile is on my face.
I either write a column
Than ride a six-day race.

CONTEMPT OF COURT.

"I would I were a judge," said William Klotz,
"And sat upon the case of Heine Zim.
I'd merrily clear my throat and say:
Ahem!
And slap a large and heavy fine on him.
"He could not make his usual retort
That often fills the ath-a-lete with glee,
For I would fine him for contempt of court
If he should holler 'Catfist' back at me."

If they are going to hold the Olympic games next year why not stage a bull-throwing contest between the censors of London and Berlin? We are willing to bet eight shillings against four marks on London.

Being an optimist, we hope some day to enter a place of public amusement without being forced to listen to a flock of song boosters.

A Woman Going to California Alone or With Children

Every woman, I don't care how competent and independent she is, feels a little more at ease, when traveling alone, or with children, if she can rely on a responsible official, paid to look after the comfort and convenience.

That's a special feature of our "Personally Conducted" Parties to California.

Join one. It's the best way to travel, especially for women, if comfort, interest, safety and very moderate cost are to be taken into account. The cost of it all is surprisingly low.

If you will write, or drop in at the office, and see me, I will be glad to explain every detail of the famous "Personally Conducted" Parties.

Brickley Out for New Honors in Athletics

"Charlie" Brickley, captain of last year's victorious Harvard football team, has decided to try for the track and the baseball teams at Harvard this Spring.

He is to consult Dr. Edwin H. Nichols in order to determine whether he is physically fit to stand the hard training grind, and whether putting the shot will affect his side.

Dr. Nichols will probably rule against Brickley leaving the iron pill, but he is expected to o. k. Brickley's aspirations to make the baseball nine.

A few months ago Charley announced that he would not be a candidate for either track or baseball teams. Many of his friends wished him to reconsider his decision and will be glad to hear that he has done so.

Quaker Golfers Win Extra Hole Match

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 10.—Philadelphia defeated New York, 1 up, in the first intercity indoor golf match ever staged in this city. Frank Sprogell, Philmont Country Club, and David Cuthbert, Valley Country Club, represented Philadelphia ,while Isaac MacKie, Fox Hills, and Joseph Mitchell, Upper Montclair, played for New York. At the end of the regulation thirty-six holes the match was tied at 87 strokes, and decided to play an extra nine holes, the Philadelphia winning, 22 to 21.

Evers in Good Health Says Braves Owner

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—President Gaffney of the Boston Braves denied that Johnny Evers, second baseman of the world's champions, is seriously ill. He said that he received a letter from the Trojan not so long ago in which Evers wrote that he was in the best of health and anxious for the season to begin.

Carter and White Pinehurst Winners

PINEHURST, N. C., Feb. 10.—Young Carter and Gardiner White won in a four-ball match against Donald Ross and Prentice MacKinnight, by 2 up and 1 to play, and Carter's 78 was the best card. Open champion Hagan and a bunch of professionals also were on the links.

"The Rabbit's" Column By Walter J. Maranville SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

Here's the new contest, boys and girls!

To the one who picks out the best team in the National League, using the names of players who took part in one or more National League championship games last season, I will give a box (six seats) for any game played by the Braves on home grounds this season—Saturdays and holidays included—the winner may select.

AND.

To the one who picks out the best team in the American League, using the names of players who took part in one or more American League championship games last season, I will give a box (six seats) for any game played by the Red Sox on home grounds this season—Saturdays and holidays included—the winner may select.

Now, then, that's the proposition. Fill out the blank that will be found at the head of this column and mail it to me.

The coupon is here for the sake of convenience. In the other contest those who sent replies—and their were thousands of them —used all kinds of paper from the size of a postage stamp to the size of the three-sheet bill poster—and that made it hard for those of us who had to handle the letters. By using the coupon the answers will be of uniform size and can be more easily handled.

Answers will be filed as received and when the contest closes they will be examined. I will ask three or four of the big league managers to help me pick the winners of the contest—that is, I will ask them to name the best team that could be picked in the American and National Leagues and with these expert selections as a basis the contest will be judged. Of course, if more than one reader picks the same combination, the prize will be awarded to the first received.

Send in your answers as you like, but a coupon must be used in every case.

The winner of the "Manager's Contest" will be announced in next Sunday's AMERICAN on the sporting pages.

Wild Bill Donovan, the new manager of the Yanks, is acquiring a lot of stuff strutted about him these days. Here is Story No. 15,459 of Wild Bill's days in Philadelphia, where Bill was brought up.

When Bill as a youngster was pitching on the sand lots of Philadelphia, his greatest trouble was a lack of control.

Wild Bill knew that he was wild, and he made a considerable effort to overcome it. There was a negro cemetery at Nineteenth and McKean streets, on the fence of which Bill drew a number of the erratic propensities, much to the chagrin of the fielders, who took Bill's high-jinks seriously.

Bill would draw a circle with a diameter of about 41 inches on one of the boards of the cemetery fence, and then try to put his regulation pitching distance like a shot from a rifle ball would speed for the target. After Bill got warmed up he would nearly miss it. But a few well-directed shots with his pronunciation would soon free the board from its moorings, and Bill would move on to another.

He made a decent showing here last year in his debut against Miller after a tournament. The season of the strawberry refused to recognize Bill's budding genius and classic nine over the base-ball-brain, and he was released.

Lee Magee, the Cincinnati star who jumped the traitorous Feds, declared that anyone who could hit Walter Johnson's fast-curving ability can hit no pitcher in the league. Lee proved it by most of the Bush pitchers and several other sluggers that he encountered during the season. Magee "pots are handicapped two ways. First, the dangerous ability of the pitchers and the whole area of the ballpark.

"These terrorists pitch every one pitch in the 154 games they play. Even that pretty good record, to gave their shoulder a rest. Also, I have a very careful system of studying batters. Before I go to bat I study the pitcher in the infield.

"That would be only logical, for the best pitchers are the ones who have the greatest control and the most effective assortment of curves. Pitchers who send the ball all over the plate and keep the batter too busy dodging don't go much above .200 mark.

Meanwhile, the umpires are hanging down their heads in shame because the umpires give the pitchers away the best of it in the matter of balls and strikes, favors the batters. Consequently, batters have time to study and locate the smallest curve that shows strikes, the other batsmen have a decided edge in judgment than in the box. You don't have to stand in front of the plate and guess when a ball is to be put, if you can really see it all the time. You can't be fooled often, and hit at least as often as you ever did in the ball fielders."

HOCKEY NOTES AND GOSSIP

"BOBBY" BAKER HAS PROMISED 10 White Mountain fans a new Evening of St. Nick on their behalf. Bobby will if the Seals do a non-stand in defending Herald at the Arena Friday night.

SO GREAT HAS BEEN THE DEMAND FOR tickets to see the "Canucks" perform that Manager Lagace figures that the sale of tickets will be closed long before the game begins. Boss is doing his part at a Winnipeg rooting club because of the defeat the B. A. A. team caused on the St. Nicks.

THE INTERSCHOLASTIC LEAGUE HAMpionship Meeting Hub and Medford High will be played Friday evening, February 26. Medford has shown a great brand of hockey in the series and if it has the opponent of Belle Isaac that the game will be called to a Friday evening.

MEDFORD AND MELROSE ARE SURE to begin finals in football and contest over the Hub Championship will be decided between these two clubs. Medford has defeated Melrose in both games played this season.

WITH PEABODY BACK IN THE ARLINGton High fences the team ought to present something of the second match with Melrose High, which will be played at the Arena on the afternoon of Washington's Birthday.

MELROSE IS SO CONFIDENT OF WINning the title that the team has already applied for road season tales with outside managers.

BIG PURCHASES TO AID 'BUY IT NOW'

The "Buy It Now" movement started by the Boston AMERICAN is now backed by Boston merchants almost to a man, and the strength today is the keynote from the West that railroads have placed over $50,000,000 of contracts in Boston in two days. This means that there is going to more for the railroads, the furnaces and mills are to reopen and go to full time.

When the railroads buy there will be big, new business. Railroad manager agents are always the first precursors of prosperity. They are the barometers that indicate and foretell with unfailing accuracy.

DO YOUR SHARE.

Help the big move along. To begin with, "Buy It Now" is the slogan of President W. C. Brown of the New York Publicity Association, because the Hon. John Purroy Mitchell, mayor of New York, is one of the pioneers in conditions all over the country to-day.

This is the real time to start a "Buy It Now" movement. There is a pessimism that prevails among American manufacturers because of the stringency now going on in Europe is ended. But buyers and manufacturers throughout the country are looking toward the immense future with their wants shattered, confidence fully restored. The shutting of the rail roads has been greatly improved by the economy in rates granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The case looking system is working smoothly and the money market has removed. Stocks of merchandise on hand are cut down up or greatly reduced.

What's more, the three billions of dollars in the situation is the important difference. American manufacturers are now in place of the $3,000,000 of goods imported from Germany and the strife began. I see every reason why "Buy It Now" should be profitable to the buyer as well as the seller. In certain lines prices were never lower.

Magrane-Houston Manager Speaks

J. A. Davis, advertising manager of the Magrane-Houston Company, spoke on "The Price Factor in Retail Advertising" before the retail advertising forum of the Filene Publicity Association last night.

Manager Davis described the Magrane-Houston advertising and told of experiences. Discussing the necessity of careful thought in advertising, he said this had been adopted by a leading New York store, and that to some extent it existed in Boston. He added that a comparison of methods of advertising in Chicago and in Boston in his opinion disclosed that cities as well as localities in retail advertising demand an entirely different treatment.

Horstmann to Head Exhibitors' League

At the annual meeting and dinner of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Massachusetts, which was held at the Quincy House, Samuel H. Horstmann was re-elected president. This will make him head for the year at the head of the organization which he founded. Other officers elected were: First vice-president, Joseph Brown; second vice-president, C. F. Lydon; treasurer, H. G. Clark, and secretary, F. W. Browne.

Oil Tank on Fire at the Navy Yard

Oil in a feed pipe leading to a tank in the blacksmith shop in Building 163, Charlestown Navy Yard, ignited early today. Fire Chief Tenney put out the blaze before the Charlestown apparatus arrived. No part of the shop were, making new ship-building ways and had been working all night.

Boston Men Ask for Federal Building

Boston lawyers and business men will attend a hearing in Washington today on Congressman Gallivan's bill for a $5,000,000 federal building in Boston. Among the boosters will be Arthur H. Hill, T. H. Hinsey, James A. Jaswell, Jesse Morton, Postmaster Murray and Jose Lawell.

MOTOR NOTES

By J. C. KERRISON.

The ball of the Massachusetts Automobile Association was held in Horticultural hall last evening was one of the most enjoyable and successful affairs of its kind that has ever been held in that famous building.

The interior of the hall was pleasingly decorated for the occasion and the committee of arrangements has reason to feel well satisfied with the results of its painstaking work. The attendance was a good one and the festivities and pleasures did not cease until several hours had followed the usual defined hour of the breaking of bells.

President W. C. Bates and the members of the board of directors were everywhere in evidence assisting the officers of the association in caring for and entertaining the guests. Secretary Bowen and assistant secretary Shaw, he being assisted by W. J. Roper and Arthur Cooke, while W. F. G. Pratt was floor director, Martin Warner, chief of police; George H. Kneeland, chairman of the reception committee, for seeing the co-operation of Sweet was sufficient guarantee.

The Brewerton Company is to remove its headquarters from its present location to the new buildings at the corner of Brookline avenue and Beacon streets. This building is also to be completed and the garages to be occupied by the Brewerton Company for storing, repairing and especially fitted for their needs.

Conrad Smith, of the local Cole Company, states that the Cole eight-cylinder, which is now making record sales, will be ready for the purchaser early in April. The Cole factory is running full time on all of the previous production and 1,000 eight-cylinder cars will be delivered in the course of the next ninety days.

To the Women of Metropolitan Boston

BUY IT NOW

You realize more than men the advantage of buying in the lowest market. Men never are so keen on bargains as their wives. Few men have the sense to buy what they do not IMMEDIATELY need because it is cheap and they WILL need it later.

Therefore, it is not necessary to tell the women of Metropolitan Boston that it is wise to buy NOW if they can buy more cheaply NOW. It is only necessary to tell them that they actually CAN buy more cheaply NOW than they will be able to buy later, when conditions become more normal.

Why? The reason is simple and women will understand it on the mere statement of it. Two important things which affect prices have combined to make them low AT THIS MOMENT. First, the war and general unsettled, unfavorable business conditions have unexpectedly reduced the demand for goods. Second, the season itself has been abnormal and erratic. When it should have been mild, under normal conditions, it has been exceedingly cold. When it should have been cold, under normal conditions, it has been unseasonably warm. January has always been a month of sunshine and even temperature, the best month of the Winter. This last January has been the wettest January on record. The sun has shone only four days in the whole month.

Now, the merchants, not anticipating the tremendous cataclysm in Europe and its consequent effect upon our business conditions, laid in a stock of goods which would meet the normal demand of a normal year. But the greatest war in all human history is dragging out interminably. Everybody expected that the deadly weapons today employed in warfare would make this conflict short and decisive. But everybody was wrong. This uncertainty has so disturbed conditions that numbers of people are out of employment and generally too poor to buy. Then the stock laid in for the season remains on the counters, or in store-houses unsold, because the seasons did not come at their usual time.

Now all this means that the merchants have stores of unsold goods which they cannot afford to carry over to the next season and must sell at cost or even at a loss, not only to have the room they take, but to obtain money with which to buy a new line of goods that will be demanded for the new season.

But the woman at the head of the family is under no such necessity. She expects to live and expects her husband and her children to live during the next season and she can buy for her family now things which will probably be very much higher the next time she needs them. If she buys Winter clothing now, she will have the use of it for the remainder of the season and Winter will not be over until the 21st of March. Whatever she buys now, IF SHE REALLY NEEDS IT SOMETIME, will be wisely and cheaply bought.

This editorial is not intended to urge women to buy UNNECESSARY things merely because they are bargains. A thing which we do not need and WILL not need, is expensive at any price. But things which we DO need now or LATER, can be bought today for less than they will cost when things resume their normal condition.

Remember that the shrewd men who have amassed fortunes out of speculation never buy when the market is rising and prices are high. They watch and wait until the time comes when everybody is frightened and unwilling to buy, and so stocks have gone down. Then they buy at the lowest price and put away their bargains into the safe deposit vaults and await the time when courage comes back and everybody is buying and helping by their purchases to raise prices against themselves and against everybody else.

TODAY IS THE DAY, WHEN FEW PEOPLE ARE BUYING, AND TODAY IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY, MADAM, TO GET BARGAIN PRICES.

Huge Cost and Great Energy Wasted in War

Struggling Armies Rivalling Makers of Panama Canal in Labor, While Money Price Far Surpasses Greatest Engineering Feat

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

THE cost of six months of Europe's mad war has been figured at the stupendous sum of $8,000,000,000, or twenty-four times the cost of the Panama Canal!

In a single month this war squanders four times the cost of the greatest engineering work ever undertaken and achieved by man!

There is not a government in the world that could be persuaded to expend one-tenth of that sum on any great undertaking for the benefit of the public and of humanity, and yet those hundreds of millions are poured out without stint to maintain struggling armies in the field, to destroy the fairest cities and the most admirable creations of art on the globe, and to send hundreds of thousands of the most perfect specimens of young manhood that the race possesses to an untimely death!

Consider the waste of mere physical energy that this contest involves—energy which, properly applied, would transform the face of the civilized world, reclaim all the waste places on the planet, increase the productivity of the whole earth and almost rival the gigantic engineering feats that imaginative astronomers have ascribed to the inhabitants of the planet Mars.

Take only the amount of work wasted in digging trenches and throwing up breastworks. The battle fronts on which the opposing armies, comprising millions of men, are in touch with one another, aggregate hundreds of miles, and on both sides they are continually "digging themselves in," burrowing deep into the earth to escape the shrapnel and the bombs showered down upon them.

Suppose that there are at any one time only 200 miles of such intrenchments. To dig them it is probable that at least a cubic yard of earth must be moved for every linear yard of intrenchment. That would make 528,000 cubic yards in all, or say, for the sake of round numbers, 500,000 cubic yards. But line after line of intrenchments is constructed, as the fortunes of war sway to and fro. Then, in many of these works, the amount of earth moved must be much larger than I have estimated. Since their retirement began in France the Germans have dug themselves in at least twice, and they are continually strengthening their defences. Taking the whole amount of digging that has been done by the soldiers of Germany, France, England, Austria and Russia during the months that the war has already lasted, the quantity of material moved cannot be less than 2,500,000 cubic yards, and may be as much as 12,000,000.

Now the total amount of material removed during the long years that the Panama Canal was under construction was about 250,000,000 cubic yards, or only twenty times the maximum amount that I have estimated for the trenching operations of the European armies in two months! Usefully employed what might not that vast amount of labor have achieved?

But this is only a drop in the waste bucket of squandered physical energy that the war is filling up with frightful disregard of the ultimate consequences to mankind. Suppose that there are but ten million men subjected to the fatigues, dangers, diseases and demoralizations of war—those ten million necessarily represent the very best physical type of European manhood. They are the younger men, the stronger men, the healthier men, the more active men, because the weak are not wanted, and not taken, until the exhaustion of the others compels the war lords to force them also into the servile ranks of slaughter.

Hundreds of thousands are killed outright or wounded, so that their future usefulness is crippled; hundreds of thousands perform forced labors that result in the loss of their health and strength, and of the hundreds of thousands who will ultimately survive, untouched by any weapon or missile, hardly one individual will ever recover all of his original elasticity and capacity for work. It is well known that soldiers' lives are short, not so much because of bullets, bombs and bayonets, as because of the extremities of fatigue to which they are subjected, and the germs of disease that they cannot escape.

A GARDEN OF ROSES RED

By LAUREL RHYMES

I DREAM of a garden of roses red,
A garden of roses rare;
Of morning dew on a mossy bed,
And glorious morning air.

Oh, the glorious mornings of childhood's days!
Of days now dead to me.
But the memory of them ever stays,
Thank God for Memory!

The morning's past, 'tis noontime now,
But, oh! it seems to be
The time of setting sun, somehow—
The time of rest to me!

But who would rest ere the work is done,
Ere the Master's satisfied?
So toil we must till the set of sun,
Lest the hire be denied.

And so till the set of sun toil on,
Oh, soul of mine, achieve!
Till the grand reward and the glory's won,
For Life's not make-believe.

And then for a garden of roses red,
A garden of roses rare;
Of morning dew on a mossy bed,
And glorious morning air!

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Tells of Subtle, Hidden Faults of Many Wives

American Girl, Frequently Spoiled Before Marriage, Makes Husband Unhappy by Foolish Demands, Petty Jealousy of His Relatives and Other Failings

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

THE failings of men which lead to divorce are usually of a glaring nature; of such a nature that he who runs may read. Drunkenness, or the overuse of intoxicants, which destroys the reasoning powers and the judgment; infidelity and all its ramifications, violent temper; laziness and failure to provide for a family; these are the main chapters in the book of masculine offences against happy homes. But the offences of wives are so frequently subtle and elusive, and so veiled from the public eye, that only those who live in the closest relations may discover them.

They are the little foxes in the vines and parasites in the trees. The American girl is almost invariably a spoiled child before she reaches adolescence.

She rules her father and mother and her brothers wait upon her. She is virtually the head of the house, and her wish is law and her whims are like royal edicts. If she marries the spoiled son of a fond mother it is a case of Greek meeting Greek, and discord must ensue. And if she marries an unselfish and worshipping husband she often forgets that there is such a thing as the turning of a crushed worm, and imposes upon his patience and kindness and unselfishness until he walks forth to meet her only in the divorce court.

Hides Faults from All but Family, and Public Takes Her Side

Yet the weapons she has used in slaying Cupid have been concealed from all eyes save husband's or other eyes under her roof. And the undiscerning public is more than liable to believe she is the injured party when the divorce occurs.

The passion of many women for hotel life, for excitement and for display amounts to a disease. It is, perhaps, the swinging of the pendulum from the dull and dreary monotony which characterized the lives of their foremothers. The women of this generation are, in many ways, suffering from a sort of hysteria caused by the suppression of the emotional natures of their mothers and grandmothers just as sons of clergymen do to excess, frequently, everything which their fathers refused to do in reason.

The grandmothers and mothers who lived only to work and make the home comfortable for the men folk produced, by the crucifixion of all natural desires for pleasure and amusement, as descendants, a race of women pleasure-seekers. But in his taste for home life man changes little. He is the same in every generation. And the woman who wants to make the man she marries happy needs to understand this fact; and whatever else she may ask of him, to give him first the foundation of a comfortable, beautiful, well ordered and attractive home, where even the transient guest can feel the atmosphere of well being and content. This can be made only by those ten million necessarily represent the very best physical type of European manhood. They are the younger men, the stronger men, the healthier men, the more active men, because the weak are not wanted, and not taken, until the exhaustion of the others compels the war lords to force them also into the servile ranks of slaughter.

Hundreds of thousands are killed outright or wounded, so that their future usefulness is crippled; hundreds of thousands perform forced labors that result in the loss of their health and strength, and of the hundreds of thousands who will ultimately survive, untouched by any weapon or missile, hardly one individual will ever recover all of his original elasticity and capacity for work. It is well known that soldiers' lives are short, not so much because of bullets, bombs and bayonets, as because of the extremities of fatigue to which they are subjected, and the germs of disease that they cannot escape.

Many a man inclined to stray into forbidden folds and to seek unwholesome associations would linger in this anteroom were it provided for him by love and good sense, in place of his being forced into the unnatural surroundings of hotels.

Petty Jealousies of Husband's Relatives and Friends Lead to Divorce.

Petty jealousies of wives, hampering a good-hearted man to his impulses toward relatives and near friends, are oftimes causes of divorces. A man has been known to marry for love (as men usually do), and to set forth with every intention of being a fair and kind and just husband; but before many months he found his relatives, his men comrades and even his books and domestic pets objects of a small-minded woman's nagging jealousy. And Cupid was driven out of doors, never to return.

Unreasonable extravagance of women is another cause of disaster to the marital association, and this propensity drives many a good-hearted man whose great desire is to please his wife into dishonesty and double-dealing in business matters.

Behind prison doors today men are serving long sentences who sinned first through weakness and over-devotion to the whims of selfish and unthinking wives. The indolent wife, who settles down lazily into the comfort of a good home, satisfied with the fact that she is married to a man who loves her and unconscious that she must make an effort to keep her husband in love, is another likely candidate for the divorce court.

In our time and clime nine-nine men of each hundred like to feel proud of their wives. They enjoy seeing them look well and regret to observe the effect of time upon their beauty. The woman who does not try to keep herself attractive, and who allows self-indulgence and indolence to destroy her figure and complexion, is inviting unhappiness to come into her home.

Preservation of Her Physical Charms One of Wife's Chief Duties

In this busy age, when trains, ships, telegraphs and telephones keep the whole world in touch, men are aware of the existence of women who understand the art of defying time and who remain attractive despite the passing of years. Even in remote country places men have ceased to regard old age for the matron as a necessity. They realize there is something lacking in the temperament of a woman who lets herself go merely because she is a wife and mother.

Since men view the subject in this light, the wise woman will not permit her husband to feel ashamed of her. She will think of the art of preservation of her charms as one of her sacred duties, and she will regard the gymnasium and the study of physical culture and the process of mental calisthenics with respect close to reverence.

In the new life which has come to women in the past generation there lies a danger of becoming too absorbed in personal pursuits to keep in touch with the tastes and ambitions of the husband—even to lose all interest in them.

It is well for husband and wife to have their separate occupations and to follow separate tastes and pleasures to a certain degree. But that degree must never lead to diverging interests, and must never leave the husband feeling solitary and without the companionship or sympathy of the wife, either in his business or his amusements; nor must the wife be left to find sympathy or admiration elsewhere than at home.

THE GIRL

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

ALONE and frightened in her tiny room
She counts her few remaining pennies o'er.
And when she sees how scanty is the store
The city walls take on an added gloom,
Nor can she weep as she has wept before.

Fighting the city! Pitting baby strength
Against the roaring camp of Vice and Greed!
Why wonder that she throws away her creed?
Why wonder that she drops her arms at length?
And dare you sit in judgment who succeed?

Should a mother prevent her daughter from marrying a man who drinks? George Randolph Chester raises this intimate question in his great novel "The Enemy" now appearing in Hearst's Magazine Read this "epic of drink" and then see what you think about it.
